Protestant Theologian Says Religious Conditioning Produces Anti-Semitism

Dr. John C. Bennett, dean of faculty at Union Theological Seminary, charged in New York that "images and suggestions" in some Protestant Sunday School lesson materials stimulate anti-Jewish prejudice. The Protestant leader said that even when there was little explicit anti-Judaism among Christians, there was a religious conditioning "which prepares them for a negative attitude toward Jews."

Dr. Bennett's views were in a paper which was read during conferences marking the dedication of the American Jewish Committee's Institute of Human Relations, says the New York Times. The theologian was asked to explain how religious conditioning could produce anti-Semitism. He gave as one example the "misuse of the Crucifixion story," when it is implied "that all Jews — even contemporary Jews — share responsibility for the crucifixion of Christ."

Coincidental with Dr. Bennett's remarks was the first open act of violence against Jews in New York City during the current outbreak of anti-Semitic incidents. Two men were arrested and accused of punching an elderly Jewish couple in a Queens diner. Other developments included swastika painting on a synagogue in Queens and on a road sign in Rockland County, together with the words "Sieg Heil."

Comments were based on a seven-year study by the Yale University Divinity School of Protestant religious texts. It shows, Dean Bennett said, "that the religious roots of anti-Semitism are still important" in the U.S., says the New York Times. Assumptions that the religious factor in anti-Semitism is incidental are superficial, he said, "and do not account for the fact that the Jewish minority is singled out as a target of prejudice and abuse" in so many circumstances.

Nevertheless the theologian declared that Christianity itself provided "powerful antidotes to anti-Semitism," and he suggested attitudes that Christians should take towards Jews. Among these approaches were:

Continuous repentance for the "Christian sin of anti-Semitism." The history of Jewish-Christian relations, Dr. Bennett said, "should wipe out all tendency to 'condemn' the Jews for 'rejecting Christ'" as the Messiah.

Emphasis on the civic contributions of Jews, "who as a minority group are often more sensitive to problems of justice than the Christian majority."

Continuous criticism of the tendency "to deal with the Jewish community as an abstraction" rather than as "another human group with which we must deal as persons."

U. N. Gets Compilation Of Anti-Semitic Incidents In 25 Lands In Past Weeks

A compilation of synagogue desecrations and anti-Semitic incidents covering 25 countries on six continents within the past three weeks was submitted by the American Jewish Congress to Justice Philip Halpern, American member of the United Nations Subcommission on the Prevention of Discrimination and the Protection of Minorities.

The Subcommission is expected to act this week on a draft resolution calling on the UN Human Rights Commission and all UN members to take "appropriate action" to prevent and punish manifestations of anti-Semitism and other religious and racial prejudice.

The American Jewish Congress chart covers the period from December 25, when a swastika was smeared on the synagogue in Cologne, Germany, and touched off a global epidemic of anti-Semitic defacements, to January 14, when swastikas were painted on a Jewish fraternity house and sorority house at the University of Colorado in Boulder. Despite the admittedly incomplete and interim nature of the report, analysis of the defacements shows "recurring systems of behavior" in the outbreaks, according to an accompanying letter written by Ira Guilden, chairman of the American Jewish Congress' Commission on International Affairs, which compiled the data.

The compilation showed that: The incidents took place in waves. From December 25 to 30 acts of defacement were limited to West Germany. During the next three days swastikas appeared in London, Antwerp, Vienna, Paris, and New York. Four days later they broke out in East Germany and Latin America, and a day later in Australia. Meanwhile, swastika daubings continued in West Germany for twenty successive days. Although synagogues and Jewish communal buildings were the primary targets of vandals, Christian churches and public buildings were also smeared with swastikas and other anti-Semitic inscriptions in Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, England, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Brazil, Australia, and South Africa.

Police reaction in most cities was prompt, vigorous, and sustained, resulting in many arrests, mostly of young men in their twenties (in Germany) and in their 'teens (in the United States).

"Evidence thus far assembled does not confirm the theory that these defacements were the work of an international conspiracy," Mr. Guilden declared in his letter to Justice Halpern. But he warned against dismissing the outbreaks as "merely the work of juvenile prankaters." The care, planning, and preparation of events in places like London, Baltimore, and other cities indicate instead, Mr. Guilden said, the involvement of local gangs and groups who "seemingly have embarked upon a deliberate campaign of anti-Semitic terrorism."

The American Jewish Congress leader continued: "It would be almost comforting to learn that an international band of fanatics were solely responsible for this appalling behavior. Such a conspiracy would ultimately be detected by an aroused police force. But we are forced to the conclusion that anti-Semitism is so endemic and so near the surface that it can be triggered over night all over the world. Such deep-seated hatred of Jews, so intense that it risks arrest to engage in criminal acts, can only be counteracted, if at all, by a long and arduous program of education."

Since December 25 more than 500 anti-Semitic incidents have occurred in 240 localities in 34 countries. These figures are reported by the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs in New York, which completed a survey of the three-week period ending January 15. The survey is to be presented to a meeting of the World Jewish Congress Administrative Committee in Amsterdam on February 1 and 2, Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, World Jewish Congress Director of International Affairs, said before flying to Europe to attend the sessions.

Though these figures are not final and do not include incidents as yet unreported, records reveal that four of the 34 countries involved, accounted for approximately three-fifths of the places affected: West Germany, 55 towns; U.S.A., 44; Italy, 27; Great Britain, 24; France, 12 towns; and Sweden, 11. Three Canadian cities were affected, a similar number in Argentina, Brazil, and Mexico, and one each in Chile, Co-

Pope Tells Bnai Brith Group He Abhors Anti-Semitism

Pope John XXIII severely condemned anti-Semitism, expressing detestation and abhorrence of all forms of persecution and discrimination. The Pope was replying to an address delivered by Label A. Katz of New Orleans, president of Bnai Brith, the international Jewish service organization.

Mr. Katz and a small delegation were received in a private audience in the Pope's private study in the Vatican, reports the New York Times. The delegation included Maurice Bisgyer, of Washington, D. C., executive vice president of Bnai Brith; Max J. Schneider, of New York, a member of the organization's international board of governors; Benjamin R. Epstein, of New York, national director of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith; and Bernard Simon, of Washington, D. C., information director.

The audience lasted almost twenty minutes. Mr. Katz spoke of the "excellent relations and constructive cooperation" between Bnai Brith and many Roman Catholic organizations and institutions. He spoke also of Bnai Brith's "warm friendship with the clergy and scholars of the Church" and of the Pope's "dedicated efforts to promote world peace and advance the well-being of men."

Mr. Katz expressed appreciation of the Pope's "profound understanding and keen sensitivity" in revising some passages of the Roman Catholic liturgy in such a way as to "respect the sensibilities of the Jewish people." This was a reference to the action taken by Pope John last March and October when he ordered the deletion in some prayers of passages making objectionable references to Jews and Moslems.

After remarking that the Pope, when he was Apostolic Nuncio, or Ambassador, in Istanbul, Turkey, had "eased the anguish and aided the rescue" of Jews, Mr. Katz said:

"We share the concern of Your Holiness over the eruptive strug-

N. Y. Commission Urges Stern Move Against Hate Acts

Anti-Semitic hate expressions in New York are a "very serious" situation calling for strong community disapproval and intensified police action, it was said by leaders of religious, educational, civic, labor, industry, and veterans groups.

Recommendations in the current swastika-daubing and religious vandalism were made at an all-day conference at the New School, 60 West Twelfth Street, called by the city's Commission on Intergroup Relations, says the New York Times. In summarizing the conference's conclusions, Alfred J. Marrow, chairman of the Commission, said that police action must be stern. "Any aggressions against any minority group will not be tolerated by the community," he said.

The leaders said that the public and parochial schools should intensify efforts among students to increase respect for the various religious and ethnic groups. Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of City College, proposed neighborhood demonstrations of civic and religious solidarity. Another plan called for a parade by the city's youth.

Meanwhile, as a rash of swastika-daubing and anti-Semitic slogans was reported throughout the U.S., the German Consul General in New York issued a statement saying that the West German Government "joins with other free nations in their condemnation of racism and Nazism."

Deputy Consul General Franz-Josef Hoffman received a group of pickets in his offices at 460 Park Avenue and handed them a statement prepared by Consul General Dr. Georg A. Federer before his departure for Bonn. Dr. Federer left to report directly on American reactions to anti-Semitic incidents in Germany.

More than 100 pickets had staged the demonstration to protest what they termed a revival of Nazism and racism in Germany. The demonstrators carried placards, some of which read: "Dismiss the ex-Nazi from high government posts"; "Survivors of the death camps at Auschwitz and Buchenwald demand oust the Nazis."

Silent March Of Britons Protests Anti-Semitism

Thousands of Britons marched in silence on the West German Embassy in London to protest signs in Germany of a revival of anti-Semitism. The procession was organized by the Association of Jewish Ex-Servicemen and Women. It was joined by students, trade unionists, housewives, several Members of Parliament, two Mayors of London boroughs, and a scattered trail of children.

Scotland Yard estimated that 7,500 people took part, says the New York Times. Mounted policemen stood by as a precaution, but there were no disorders and no long disruptions of traffic. The marchers started from Marble Arch, where those who had come early crowded the edge of Hyde Park and chatted in the crisp air.

Some carried banners with the slogans: "We protest against Nazism"; "Our comrades died to stamp out Nazism"; "The blood of millions cries out." One marcher, Mrs. Claudette Kennedy, wore the blue and gray striped uniform that she had worn as a prisoner at Auschwitz.

The procession went about a mile and a half — down Park Lane, through Hamilton Place to Belgrave Square. It stopped about 300 yards from the embassy. Four of the five men who signed a letter of protest took it into the embassy to present it to Dr. Jochim F. Ritter, the Charge d'Affaires. The men were R. Ashe Lincoln, national chairman of the organizing association; Barnett Janner and Anthony Greenwood, Labor members of Parliament, and the Rev. Donald O. Cooper, minister of Kingsway Hall Methodist Church.

The fifth signer, Dr. Mervyn Stockwood, Bishop of Southwark, arrived late in his scarlet cassock and went in behind them. They stayed for forty minutes. Their note said the march was a reflection of British public opinion, holding anti-Semitism in abhorrence and convinced of the need for cleansing action by the West German government. It held that anti-Semitism in Germany was the basis on which the Nazi movement was built, and added:

"The greatest alarm, therefore, has been caused by the recrudescence of anti-Semitism in Germany and, whilst this has been condemned in public utterances

THE MINYAN

By Samuel Joseph Agnon, of Israel, greatest living Hebrew novelist; recipient of an Israel Prize for the most distinguished men and women in letters, science, and culture; honoured by the Hebrew University with an Honourary Doctorate

TRANSLATED FROM THE HEBREW BY MISHA LOUVISH

In Tiberias there lived a fine young man, the son of a widow, learned in the Torah and perfect in the fear of God, and all his days he was swift as a deer to do the will of his Father in Heaven. But, just as the skin of a deer can hardly contain its body, so the body of the youth could not hold in his soul, and one day he fell ill and was like to die. All kinds of remedies were used, and all kinds of doctors were called, but they were of no avail. If the Holy One, blessed be He, does not send healing from Heaven, what can men do?

In those days, Tiberias was full of Hassidim and men of good deeds, who knew how to pray before God. And when they heard that this young man was like to die, they were filled with pity for him, and they said to each other: "Let us pray for him, so that he may recover from his sickness."

So they all gathered together in a certain House of Study within whose walls the sound of learning and prayer was never silent, and they alloted a large sum to charity, which they divided into seven portions, so that the youth might be delivered from the seven punishments which are written in the Torah, and that there might be fulfilled for him the verse, "And charity delivers from death;" and they stood all day and all night in prayer and supplication.

Then they went to the tomb of Rabbi Meir Ba'al Haness, and to the tombs of other Rabbis and sages and righteous and pious men, whose bodies were buried in the earth of Tiberias. And they prostrated themselves upon the graves with great weeping, and lit lamps, according to the number of years of the sick youth and according to the number of years of man in this world, till the holy city was lit up by these lamps. But the soul of the young man's life sank lower and lower, like a wick without oil.

When the Hassidim saw this, they said to each other: "Beloved brethren, what more can we do for this sick man that we have not yet done?" And they answered each other: "Beloved brethren, all that we are able to do, we have already done." So they took their prayer-books and returned home in despair.

But the Holy One, blessed be He, still wished to enjoy the learning of the young man in this world, and He planted in the hearts of the relatives of the youth the idea of going up to Meron on Lag Ba'omer, to prostrate themselves upon the grave of Rabbi Shim'on Ben Yochai, that the merit of the divine sage might stand him in good stead and help him to recover from his sickness.

So they took him, in his bed, and carried him all the way until they reached Safad. And since Safad was full of many physicians, expert in books of healing and the ways of the human body, they brought the sick youth before them. When the physicians saw him, they lowered their heads with a sigh and said:

"We despair of him, we cannot lengthen his life for even an hour. But in the west of Safad there is an old burial ground with many caves; and in that place many righteous and holy men are buried, double the number of those who came out of Egypt. Take the sick man, and make the circuit of the burial ground with him; perhaps they will have pity on him and beg mercy for him."

So they went and made the circuit of the burial ground with weeping and supplication, but they saw no sign of improvement in the sick man. Then they took him and went up to Meron with him, but when they reached Meron there was no life left in him. So they put down his bed, and laid him down in front of the cave, and wept loud and long, until all the companies of pilgrims who came to prostrate themselves upon the grave of Rabbi Shim'on Ben Yochai wept with them.

At that moment, all the sages of Safad arrived with scrolls of the Torah in their hands, dancing all the way in great joy, singing songs and praises and playing all kinds of instruments. And the Rabbi of the Sefardim walked before them, an old man and a righteous, all the years of his life adorned with learning and prayer and good deeds. He saw all the people weeping and asked: "Why are you weeping?" They said to him: "A certain widow from Tiberias brought her only son here, so that he might find healing on the grave of Rabbi Shim'on Ben Yochai, and when he reached here he had passed away."

Then the Rabbi said: "God forbid that the Great Rejoicing of Rabbi Shim'on Ben Yochai should become a day of weeping and mourning." And he said to the attendants: "Send out all the men from the House of Study and from the cave, and let no man enter the cave until I call you." So they went out, and no man was left there.

Then the Rabbi said to the bearers of the bed: "Bring the sick man into the cave." So they brought him in and laid him down on pillows and rugs. He said to them: "Go out" — and they went out. When they had gone out, the Rabbi sealed the cave and made the circuit of the cave, on the inside. And he continued in prayer until the time of the afternoon service.

When the time of the afternoon service came, he opened up the cave and brought in eight wise men, who had been careful all their lives to pray with the congregation, and stood with them by the grave of Rabbi Shim'on Ben Yochai, and said: "Ben Yochai, you know that ever since we reached the age of understanding we have never let pass the hour of prayer without saying our prayers with the congregation. And now we are nine, and this young man makes ten; if you do not beg mercy for him that he may live, we shall lose the opportunity of praying with the congregation."

So they stood by the grave of Rabbi Shim'on Ben Yochai, looking at the dead lad, but they saw no sign of life in him. Then each of them put his hand in the girdle of his neighbour, and they said: "Ben Yochai, you know full well that ever since we reached the age of understanding we have not prayed in a congregation of fewer than ten, and today, on the day of your death, shall we stand here, ten men of Israel, and not say the afternoon prayer as a congregation?"

Immediately, the old Rabbi began to say the Ashrei prayer, and he read each verse with fear and terror and awe and trembling, and all his companions read each verse with him word by word. When they reached the verse: "The Lord is near to all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth," they heard a sound coming from the mouth of the sick youth. They listened carefully and heard his lips whispering: "He does the will of them that fear him," and they knew that their prayer had been accepted by God, and they knew that he lived.

This story is famous all over Safad, and I heard it from a certain man who heard it from a certain old woman who was there, but I do not remember whether the old woman came from Tiberias or Safad.

Mizrachi Women Of Canada Adopt A New Project

BY MRS. I. N. GUASTEL (HENRIETTA), 2466 NORTHCLIFFE AVENUE, MONTREAL, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, MIZRACHI WOMEN'S ORGANIZATION OF CANADA

Mrs. M. E. Stern, national President, was welcomed home from her trip to Israel by the officers of the national administrative board and the Mizrachi Women of Montreal at a meeting at which Mrs. Stern gave an enthusiastic report of the Mizrachi projects she had visited, and presented several new projects for the consideration of the national administrative board. One of these projects, a plan to build a network of Youth Centers which will cater to the needs of religious youth in border villages and new cities, was unanimously adopted.

Mrs. Stern described how recent arrivals in Israel are usually settled in new villages which lack the amenities and vocational opportunities of well-established cities. Young boys and girls in these villages need the additional training, guidance, and inspiration which can be provided only in such after-school centers. Otherwise these young people will drift; drift away from their homes and families or, worse, drift into delinquency.

Since many of the new Israelis are very religious and are eager for their children to continue in their family tradition, it is most essential that the Youth Center provide leaders and programs imbued with traditional Judaism. By putting these ideals into practice, the Youth Centers can play a truly important part in the educational and emotional integration of the newcomers.

Mrs. Stern then described the wonderful work that is being accomplished in the Haifa Community Center, the first religiously oriented Community Center in Israel, which was built, and is now being maintained, by the joint efforts of the Mizrachi Women of Canada and U.S.A. Here are activities for the entire family: a nursery school; a kindergarten; after-school clubs which provide special facilities for study and school coaching for under privileged youngsters; discussion groups for the young-marrieds; social, intellectual, and arts and crafts clubs for all ages. All these activities are permeated with the beautiful atmosphere of traditional Judaism and thus help greatly to impart a sense of social and emotional security to all who participate.

Other Mizrachi projects visited by Mrs. Stern were the afternoon clubs, Moadonim, run by the World Mizrachi Women's Organization. These are located in the poorest neighborhoods in Jerusalem and Tel-Aviv and are most effective in enriching and supplementing the curriculum of the State Religious Schools. Mrs. Stern also visited some of the many nurseries run by "OMEN", the Mizrachi Women's Organization of Israel. These nursery schools, like the Moadonim, are situated in the poorest neighborhoods and have been most effective in keeping these children away from the mission schools where the poor parents were often enticed to send their children by the extra food and clothing they received. "OMEN" and World Women also give other social welfare services to these very poor families. The entire financial support of these activities comes from the Mizrachi Women of Canada and of other countries of the free World.

Mrs. Stern also visited the exceptionally beautiful Mizrachi Children's Villages of Mossad Aliyah and Kfar Batya which were built and are maintained by the Mizrachi Women of the P.S.A. In both of these villages there is a large dormitory contributed by the Mizrachi Women of Canada. Each of these villages provides a home for 400 boys and girls and gives them a complete vocational, educational, and religious training with a modern Israeli outlook.

Mrs. Stern paid a special visit to Neve Shaanan, the nursery school in Tel Aviv which was built through the devoted efforts of the Winnipeg Mizrachi Women and which is now maintained by "OMEN". In view of the great need for this nursery by the working mothers of the district, the Mizrachi Women's Organization of Canada gives a special subvention to "OMEN" for Neve Shaanan.

The motto of Mizrachi is: "The Land of Israel, for the People of Israel, according to the Torah of Israel." Now that we have the land and we can all rejoice in the State of Israel, we must add, "Israel without the Torah is like a body without a soul." Mizrachi Women believe that Israel is the land where not only Jews can flourish but where, Judaism, the religion and the hope which preserved the Jews during their two thousand years of exile, can bring renewed inspiration and enlightenment to all mankind. Our work is to make this dream a reality. We invite all Jewish women who believe in this dream with us to join our organization and support the upbuilding of an Israel, strong in its Judaism.

gles between good and evil that challenge our generation and that of our children. The desecration of synagogues and churches — whatever the stimulation and motivation that underlies this behavior — is a matter of grave import to all who have a deep-rooted belief in the inviolability and dignity of man."

"The discordant events of these past weeks," Mr. Katz continued, "caution us that there is an urgency for men of goodwill and democratic spirit to continue to stand together more resolutely than ever in defense of justice, morality, and universal peace."

"We are confident that righteousness shall prevail," he said.

It is a Vatican rule not to allow the Pope to be quoted when he speaks in a private audience, so there is no record of what the Pontiff said in reply.

After the audience, Mr. Katz limited himself to saying that it had been "extremely satisfying" and that the Pope's response had been "gracious and very gratifying." Vatican sources said the Pope had been positive and outspoken in his condemnation of anti-Semitism in all its manifestations.

Mr. Katz and his delegation had paused in Rome on their way to Israel to confer with Premier David Ben-Gurion and participate in laying the cornerstone of a Bnai Brith house.

lombia, Ecuador, Panama, and Uruguay. Incidents are known to have occurred in East Berlin and Oranienburg in East Germany, but these are the only ones within the Soviet sphere so far traced by the World Jewish Congress. Tel-Aviv, Lydda, Eilat, and three other Israeli places were the scene of incidents.

The World Jewish Congress, which has affiliated organizations in 65 countries, based its survey on information directly received from its offices and affiliates and on a scrutiny of 145 newspapers in Canada, the United States, and Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, France, Israel, and Sweden. "These figures are deeply disturbing," said Dr. Perlzweig. "Nothing like this has happened since the destruction of the Nazi military machine by the United Nations. There have been in the past few years numerous anti-Semitic incidents in Germany. Why were they not followed, as was the synagogue desecration on Christmas Eve in Cologne, by a world-wide wave of such incidents? We shall know a great deal more about the nature and origins of this deeply disturbing phenomenon when we can answer that question."

The international community and all civilized countries had a clear duty, the WJC leader stated. In the field of education all countries should seek to implement the directive embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. "Education, it says," Dr. Perlzweig quoted, "shall promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among all nations, racial or religious groups." "But our education has been terribly defective. We have done too little to take prejudice out of the textbooks and we have failed to discharge our plain duty to promote a belief in the unity of the human family in our schools."

Dr. Perlzweig said the time had come for the international community and governments to re-examine the possibility of using legislative and administrative means to deal with the problem of incitement. There again there was guidance in the Universal Declaration, which in its concluding article declares that the human and democratic rights which it embodies may not be interpreted "as implying for any state, group or person any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms."

Questioning how much had been done to prevent the perversion of democratic rights being used for the destruction of democracy itself, Dr. Perlzweig declared "It is time we took a new look at this difficult problem." The WJC meeting in Amsterdam, to be attended by Jewish leaders from Europe, North and South America and Israel, will hear latest reports on the anti-Semitic incidents throughout the world.

The West German statement said that the Bonn Government "joins with the millions of youths and the overwhelming majority of the German people in their condemnation of the events of the past few weeks, reports the New York Times. The anti-Semitic vandalism and hate expressions began after a synagogue at Cologne, Germany, was discovered desecrated on Christmas Eve.

by leaders of the Federal and laender governments, insufficient action has been taken to end Nazi influence."

Mr. Lincoln said afterward that Dr. Ritter had given assurances that both anti-Semitism and Nazism were abhorred by his government and that it would continue to work against them, says the New York Times.

Mr. Lincoln also said he had told Dr. Ritter that he did not accept Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's view that the daubing of synagogues and churches was done by hooligans. "It had the appearance of being by Nazi organizations," he said. "We want to see this dealt with by force of law."

Dominican Jews, 440, Cause "No Headaches"

The World Jewish Congress in New York has helped the Jewish community of the Dominican Republic to solve a major Jewish educational problem: lack of manpower. During a recent visit to New York, Alfred Rosenzweig, a member of the Dominican Congress and vice-president of the Jewish Center of Dominica, sought World Jewish Congress help in finding a teacher for the community's education program. Within a matter of days, the cultural office was able to put Mr. Rosenzweig in touch with a suitable candidate who has already left New York to take up his duties as Hebrew teacher and synagogue reader for the communities in Ciudad Trujillo and Sosua. The WJC is also arranging to send books for the children in the two communities.

In all, the Dominican Jewish community consists of approximately 440 persons, about 200 in the capital Ciudad Trujillo; 210 in the agricultural settlement of Sosua, and some 30 in the town of Santiago. The present Jewish community of Dominica is no more than 20 years old. Mr. Rosenzweig recalls that when the first group of Jewish refugees from Nazism arrived in 1940, they found no active Jewish life, but only some remains of former Jewish families. At the beginning of the 19th century a number of Jewish families arrived from Curacao and settled on the southern shores of the republic which was then a Spanish colony. The community prospered and, following the declaration of Dominican independence in 1844, some members attained high positions in government.

In the 1880's, as pogroms terrorized Russian Jewry, General Gregorie Luperon offered Russian Jews a home. The General, who had played a leading part in throwing off the colonial yoke, put his offer on record: "They (the Jews of Russia) deserve our consideration and sympathy for two reasons, first, they are human beings, our brethren; second, they are being persecuted. We shall receive them in Santo Domingo with open arms." On another and more recent occasion, Dominica again offered its hospitality to Jews, this time the victims of Nazism. About 4,000 took advantage of this opportunity but, through the years, the majority moved on to other lands in North and South America and elsewhere.

Those who remained include the community at Sosua, the 27,000-acre farm provided by General Trujillo for the refugees from Europe. With cooperation from the authorities and Jewish philanthropic funds, the settlement, in 20 years, has achieved a reputation of being the dairy capital of the country. The milk and meat products of Sosua are widely used in the country's hotels, restaurants, and stores.

Government officials, assessing the impact of Dominican Jewry on the country, have expressed the view that the wave of Jewish immigration contributed considerably towards Dominica's progress without causing "any headaches at all." Two years ago the communities founded the Centro Israelita de la Republica Dominicana Inc., affiliated with the World Jewish Congress, and initiated a building program. With the aid of a $60,000 gift from the Generalissimo, the community was able to build a spacious and modern center in the capital. It contains a synagogue, library, assembly hall, and classrooms. In a report to the recent Stockholm Assembly of the World Jewish Congress, Mr. Rosenzweig declared that the Jewish community had suffered no discrimination in any way at all, nor had any restrictions been placed on would-be immigrants.

ABC AUDITED PAIR CIRCULATION

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is not sponsored by a group or an organization and which had the distinction of being a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

The Jewish community will turn out en masse at the Bicentenary Day rally in the Canadian Room of the Royal York Hotel on February 9, at 8:15 p.m. "It is most important at this crucial time in Jewish life that there be a resounding demonstration of community solidarity through a mass attendance," said J. To celebrate 200 years of Jewish life in Canada the honoured guests will be His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada and Mrs. Vanier. There will be readings of the proclamation of the bicentenary by Jewish Canadian dramatic artists, Lloyd Bochner and Paul Kligman, of CBC-T.V., in English and Yiddish, respectively; and Mrs. Ruth Segal, former member of the Ohel Theatre Group in Israel, now resident in Toronto, will give the reading in Hebrew. The World Of Yester-Year And The World Of The Future

BY DR. NEHEMIAH ROBINSON, DIRECTOR OF THE WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS INSTITUTE OF JEWISH AFFAIRS, NEW YORK

The first 60 years of our century constitute, no doubt, the most eventful and fateful period in the history of mankind and of the Jewish people. In 1900, a few Great Powers in Europe represented the real political, cultural, financial, and economic center of the world. Turkey was, territorially, a Great Power but already in the progress of dissolution; Japan had just started its upward climb. For the rest, Asia was a European domain, except for a weak China and a few small, formally independent nations, Persia and Afghanistan. Africa and the Middle East were in the hands of European powers. The Americas, while growing economically and financially, constituted for all practical purposes a world of and for itself.

The vast majority of the Jews were concentrated in Russia and the Austro-Hungarian Empire, in the former subject to stringent political and economic discrimination; in the latter, politically more emancipated, although not to the same extent in all regions. Culturally and internal-politically it was a period of blooming which, unfortunately, did not last too long; political Zionism was just born. It was a period of mass migration from the two empires to overseas and West Europe. In Western Europe (including Germany) emancipation had progressed considerably and the communities were on their way to cultural and social integration. Oriental Jewry slumbered.

Within the first twenty years of this century the map of the world and of the Jews changed radically. As a result of the First World War the Russian, Austro-Hungarian, and Turkish empires were destroyed and their Jewries split. What remained of the Russian empire became, after a prolonged civil war, the first Communist State in the world. Poland, constituted of parts of the Russian, Austro-Hungarian, and German empires, became the abode of the largest Jewish community in Europe. The Jewries of enlarged Rumania and Yugoslavia were enriched by culturally more advanced communities which before the war were part of the Russian and Austro-Hungarian empires and the latter empire, respectively, while those of Austria and Hungary became remnants of large and flourishing units; the small Baltic countries just emerged as sovereign states. On the ruins of the Turkish empire arose mostly mandated territories with considerable Jewish communities. The Balfour Declaration and the Palestine Mandate laid the foundations for a Jewish homeland in that country.

The ensuing twenty years (1920-1940) were divided into two distinct periods: the first 12 years were a time of cultural and organizational growth in the largest Jewish community, Poland, the Baltic countries, and the new and enlarged southeastern European nations. Economically and politically, however, it was a period of growing "national" tension and discrimination, despite the minorities' guarantees established by international acts. Migration overseas and to West Europe slackened; immigration to Palestine, although not too large numerically, made considerable progress. A curtain descended on the Jews of the Soviet Union insofar as international contacts, Zionism and Hebrew culture were concerned, but Yiddish schools and other cultural activities and, in the areas of dense settlement, some forms of local autonomy were still much in evidence.

By the end of the period most of it was gone, however. With the ascension of the Nazi Party to power in 1933 in Germany, a radical change for the worse developed in the over-all situation in Central, Eastern and Southeastern Europe. A new period of migration and refugee movement commenced but only a small portion was saved. By the end of this "chronological" period the fate of European Jewry was already decided in the minds of the Nazi hierarchy. The expansion of the Third Reich (Austria, Czechoslovakia, etc.) and the start of the war on September 1, 1939, clearly inaugurated the new, most tragic period in Jewish history.

The last period under review witnessed the gradual engulfing of practically all Europe by the Third Reich and the systematic annihilation of every Jew in this area. The end of the war on May 8, 1945, saved whatever Jews were still alive, but all larger and smaller traditional Jewries in the East and the vast majority of the other Jewries were gone forever. The pitiful remnants of these Jewries in the former geographical areas were trying to escape from the blood-soaked lands, the growing anti-Semitism, and the new regimes; they succeeded in varying degrees. The others began to rebuild their shattered lives in small numbers and under difficult conditions.

The proclamation of the State of Israel (the culmination of hopes of the Jews) in 1948 changed the situation by providing a haven for the uprooted Jews of the East, whose fate had become expressed in two letters: "DP". Great changes also took place in Asia and Africa. In the Arab world the struggle in and for Israel led to increased animosity toward the Jewries of the Moslem lands and to large-scale action against them. This, together with the call of the reborn State, resulted in mass emigration from all Moslem countries, practically denuding some countries of Jews, considerably reducing the communities in others.

Almost all went to Israel. Considerable emigration, when permitted, also took place from Eastern Europe (So-called Peoples' Democracies), except for the Soviet Union which did not permit emigration, apart from a few individual instances, and at the same time sharpened the attack on Jewishness in its religious and cultural aspects, not to speak of the dark Stalin period when the physical integrity of the Jews was in the balance.

The present position is: At the turn of this year there remain only three numerically strong Jewish communities: the U.S.A. Soviet Union, and Israel. There are a few other communities numbering over 100,000 (Argentina, Brazil, Canada, France, Great Britain, Morocco, Rumania, and South Africa), the rest comprising thousands or, at best, tens of thousands of Jews. The split between the communities of the Peoples' Democracies (except Yugoslavia) and Jewry in the rest of the world remains as it ever was, the only exception being the recent reaffiliation of the Hungarian Jewish community with the World Jewish Congress and less formal contacts between Polish Jewry and the Congress, as well as the readmission of the American Joint Distribution Committee and the ORT into Poland.

The future position: What of the future? The most recent period has shown a certain tendency to a breaking down somewhat of the barriers between the two opposing worlds. So far, except for visits, the change relates to the least controversial matters (exchange visits, cultural and scientific matters). On the political level even some setbacks have occurred on the general scene, for instance, tightening of controls in the Peoples' Democracies, and on the Jewish level, granted permission to emigrate from Rumania was revoked. The breaking down of barriers is still in such a tentative stage that no more or less reliable prognosis is possible. It is, however, quite possible that the thaw in the relations between East and West will not only continue but also deepen in time, because of certain general political, social, and economic developments in the world, which may work in favor of a certain rapprochement or, at least, more contacts between the Soviet Union and the West.

From the Jewish point of view, too, in a sense, "area" problems would be affected. On the "direct" level, contacts between the Jews in the "Peoples' Democracies" and the "free world" may become easier; a certain change may also occur in the general position of Soviet Jewry, although the process of de-Judaisation in the cultural and religious fields has gone much farther than elsewhere in that area. In the "indirect" aspect, the changes may be more far-reaching. If the two camps would reach some understanding, in particular on their involvement in the Middle East and Africa, the animosity toward Israel as the "bastion of Anglo-American imperialism" in the Middle East could subside and Arab countries could lose Soviet support in their fight against Israel and the Jews.

Once the atmosphere regarding Israel is cleared on the international scene and Soviet external and internal propaganda against the Jewish State eliminated, some of the thorniest problems facing Soviet Jews and those of the "Peoples' Democracies" would disappear, emigration to Israel, at least within reasonable bounds, could be resumed and even the anti-religious propaganda on the Jewish scene lessened. If the Arabs lose their strongest "ally", they will have no choice but to "accept" the presence of Israel. It will come too late for their Jewish communities which, by now, are practically non-extant, but it would benefit, at least in part, North African Jewries, particularly if the Algerian problem is also solved.

The possible changes in the general atmosphere will, as such, hardly affect the internal position of the Jews outside the areas mentioned, although they would lift a heavy burden from their shoulders. The international Jewish organizations, in the first place the World Jewish Congress, would be able to plan and conduct their work in a more peaceful atmosphere. The "traditional" Jewries, as referred to, are gone and no "new blood" may be expected to be infused in the West. The organized Jewish communities would, however, be able to devote more energy and funds to the basic challenge of our time, the maintenance, outside of Israel, of Jewish identity, as equal citizens of the State in a world free of serious anti-Jewish discrimination, let alone action.

Certainly, these still exist, and will apparently continue to exist, anti-Semitic publications and some such organization; there still are and will be some anti-Jewish feelings and bias on the social and employment level, even in the most advanced countries. But, if no general radical events occur to reverse the trend, discrimination is doomed to decrease, even if only gradually and slowly. The Jews who survived many periods of pogroms and vicious persecutions, will also find ways to survive in a free society, although it may take some time until a new pattern has fully evolved.

CONGRESS DISAVOWS "EXCLUSIVE" COUNTRY CLUB AD

The Toronto "Globe and Mail" carried a quarter-page advertisement announcing the establishment of an "exclusive Jewish golf and country club" giving particulars on grounds, membership fee, etc., and listing a Box Number address. Following the appearance of the advertisement, Prof. J. Finkelman, of Toronto, as chairman of the Central Region, and S. M. Harris, as chairman of the Central Region joint public relations committee, sent the following statement to the "Globe and Mail" for release:

"The Canadian Jewish Congress deprecates the advertisement carried in Saturday's Globe and Mail announcing the establishment of an 'exclusive Jewish golf and country Club'. It is and always has been our position that the manifestation of such a restrictive policy is in bad taste. We believe that it is offensive to the public at large to flaunt such an intention which is in violation of tenets acceptable to all Canadians sincerely concerned as they are with a civic sense of unity. We find such announcements objectionable no matter what the source. It is our hope that eventually barriers between groups in Canada will vanish. This type of advertisement tends to delay that day rather than hasten it."
